UNCLE SAM'S ARMY DEFEAT NAVY FIGHTERS IN BATTLE FOR PIGSKIN HONORS

COUNTRY'S FUTURE DEFENDERS MEET IN FIERCE GRIDIRON BATTLE

most brilliant ever seen on a football field, or rather around it.

Twenty-two young men, together with their substitutes, were the cause of all the display. Half of them represented Uncle Sam's training school for the army officers and the others' of those who are learning naval affairs at Annapolis.

Their fight to a finish for the football supremacy was the cause of it all. FINAL GAME OF THE YEAR.

INAL GAME OF THE YEAR.

The game was the final one of the year. Other championships have year of brilliant gridiron contests.

While games between Yale and Princeton and Yale and Harvard have drawn greatly on society's patronage, the two together could not be compared to this host at Franklin Field this afternoon to see the future admirals and generals at the play. Even the members of the Administration took a day off to see the combat.

There, for one, was Secretary of War Root. Ordinarily his interest would have been neutral, but to-day it was with the Navy. On that team was his son, and every move made by the young fellow for Annapolis was watched with the interest of a mother over a six-months-old child.

But Secretary Root was only one of many of Washington official corps.

When the game began some of the West Point men were more fit for the we yards, and Root spot a moment mean paint and the ball went to Farnsworth on the West Point 1-yard line. A gain of three yards was made by Prince through centre on the next play. Prince through centre on the next point of the ball on the West Point 45-yard line. A drive at centre netted the Navy nothing. Then the saliors tried the sight tackle, and Root, who carried the ball salied to Decker on the navy's five-gained two years. Howard then stepped thack for a kick, and the ball salied to Hackett, in the middle that the ball stope of the ball of the field, and the soldier was had downed where he got the ball.

Prince went back to kick for the Army's line, and the Navy got the ball on the Navy stards to Prince on the next try.

Prince went back to kick for the Army's line, and the Navy got the ball on the Army's line turnly, but a bad pass resulted in Prince took Farinsworth's place at right laif-back for West Point, Prince punted the Navy got the ball on the Army's line, and then Chembers tried a goal from the field from the 23-yard line. He succeeded in kickking a goal, and the whole was the selected in kickking a goal, and the whole was the selected in kickking a goal, and the whole was the selected in kicking a goal, and the whole was the selected in kicking a goal, and the whole was the selected in kicking a goal, and the whole was the selected in kicking a goal, and the whole was the selected in kicking a goal, and the whole was the selected in kicking a goal, and the whole was the selected in kicking a goal, and the whole was the selected in kicking a goal, and the whole was the selected in kicking a goal, and the whole was the selected in kicking a goal, and the whole was the selected in kicking a goal, and the whole was the selected in kicking a goal, and the whole was the selected in kicking a goal, and the whole was the selected in kicking a goal, and the whole was the selected in kicking a goal, and the whole was the selected in kicking a goal, and the whole was the selected in kicking a goal, and t But Secretary Root was only one of many of Washington official corps.

All Washington, it seemed, was at the scene of the fray. Gold lace and attractive uniforms were seen everywhere. The display of army and navy colors only tended to enhance the beauty of the scene.

But the football players were the heroes of the hour. Officers of both army and navy who have won distinction and honor in battle were completely lost sight of. None but the gray-clad youths from West Point or the blue-dressed boys from Annapolis aroused much interest. In the crowd which stood by and rooted for the army was George B. McClellan, Mayorelect of New York, but even to the New Yorkers present he was just an ordinary spectator.

Football was the thing to-day. And at that it looked like West Point. Even the thousands which sat in the stand of the Navy's rooters admitted that defeat seemed to be the dose fixed up for the "future admirals."

HOPED FOR A SURPRISE.

Still they hoped and hoped, and in hoping knew that if things would come as they liked them the football surprise of the year would be seen to-day.

On paper none but the worst figurer in the world could see where Annapolis had a chance of pulling off a victory. Time and again this year the has gone down to defeat, and in doing so fell before such teams as those produced by preparatory schools. West Point men were more fit for the hospital cots than the gridiron, yet for the sake of their academy they.

As for Annapolis, her men were all in superb shape. There was no complaint on that score.

"If we were only a little heavier," said Capt. Soule before the game, "we would win. We are fast though and maybe we will surprise the army boys by circling their ends for gains that will eventually earn us a touchdown at some time or other during the contest."

At 2 o'clock the Navy team dashed on the field, and the Orange and Old Gold and Blue of the north rtand waved and a big cheer greeted the players. A few minutes later the Army boys came out and that was a cue for the cheers of the West Pointers and the waving of the Gray and Old Gold and Black for West Point.

The Navy won the toss and chose the goal to defend back of which a heavy breeze blew.
